

SOUTH CHINA SEA

February 17, 2021

Global Situational Awareness

The South China Sea continues to emerge as an important geopolitical issue involving both regional and global powers. Issues related to economic zones, natural resources, freedom of navigation, naval activity, and territorial disputes regularly impact levels of tension between China and other countries. Recent related news highlights include French and German naval activity, and a new Chinese Coast Guard law that could increase chances of hostile incidents at sea.

Babel Channels provides dedicated topic coverage of this broad and important geopolitical issue in the new South China Sea channel, including related material on various maritime developments, legal issues and diplomatic activity, political tension, and other news.
